SUMMARY

Front end web developer with a background in social services and community organizing. Completed the Full Stack Web Development Bootcamp at Vanderbilt University where I honed my skills in HTML, CSS, JavaScript, and using APIs. I take special interest in using client-side JavaScript to create a smoother user experience. I have myriad experience working with diverse groups of people and hope to leverage that experience to build web and mobile applications that serve a wide swath of people. Ultimately, I hope to merge my community organizing and computer programming skill set to help coding become more accessible to marginalized communities and create applications that advance social equity.
